SC High School Employability Credential Dr. Kim Watkins, Dr. Jennifer Wall & LEA Leaders

The South Carolina High School Employability Credential offers applicable students with disabilities the opportunity to work towards a uniform, state-recognized credential. This pre-conference will review requirements, discuss curriculum, school based enterprises and more.

Thursday, February 27th - 1:00 PM-4:00 PM

Strategic Instruction Model: Listening and Note-taking Kendall McCleod

Listening and Note-taking is an easy to learn strategy that helps students identify and quickly capture important information during a lecture, sort main ideas and details as they write, and study their notes to earn the best test grades possible. Listening and Note-Taking is suitable for instruction in core subject courses as well as supplemental skill-based classes.

GREENVILLE, SOUTH CAROLINA

Did you know that preschoolers are expelled at 3 times the rate of children in kindergarten through 12th grade? Did you also know that students with disabilities are disproportionately represented in this number? During this session, participants will learn about how their district's codes of conduct can impact exclusionary discipline practices in early childhood. Participants will explore essential features of the Teaching and Guidance Policy Essentials Checklist (TAGPEC) and use a process of self-assessment to review and evaluate their district's codes of conduct. Early Childhood Leaders, Administrators, Directors, Principals, and Assistant Principals will also get hands-on experience to create child guidance policies that reflect their commitment to all young children's social, emotional, and behavioral success.

A COLLABORATION BETWEEN SCPI AND THE DORCHESTER
TWO PRESCHOOL CONTINUUM TASK FORCE

We want to eliminate preschool suspensions and expulsion, but how do we break the cycle? Join us to explore strategies that you can use to keep preschool children engaged and learning. You'll learn about how these effective strategies are being used in classrooms in South Carolina. You will participate in lively "make and take" activities, providing hands-on opportunities to create tools that can be used in your own program or classroom after this session.

These evidence-based strategies will help early childhood general education or special education teachers, administrators, paraprofessionals, and parents ensure positive outcomes for all children.
